ROME, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Hundreds of university students, including women, held angry anti-French demonstrations in main streets today, shouting: "We want Corsica! We want Tunis! We want Djibouti!"

Djibouti, chief town of French Somaliland, is the terminus of the only railroad to Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia, and Italy is forced to use the French owned line.

Police and soldiers in impressive numbers guarded all approaches to the French embassy. They closed off the Farnese square on which the embassy is situated, and permitted only persons who lived or worked in it to approach.

Crack carabinieri, grenadiers, Alpine troops and picked policemen guarded the embassy building.

NAZIS' GHETTO CAMPAIGN OPENS THROUGH NATION

BERLIN, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Six hundred thousand Jews took their first steps back toward ghettos today as Nazi Germany opened a segregation campaign expected to become more and more severe.

A decree issued last Saturday, forbidding German Jews and those foreign Jews who lack passports to use certain streets or enter specified establishments, became effective this morning.

Under the decree the Jews are forbidden access to the Wilhelmstrasse governmental quarter, parts of the Unter den Linden, and all theatres, cinemas, concert halls, museums, athletic grounds, public and private baths and skating rinks.

Hundreds of Jews living in the Kurfurstendamm and other fashionable streets in Berlin and other cities sought less conspicuous dwellings in anticipation of an early extension of the street ban.

"Better an end by terror than a terror without end," said a Nazi commentator on the repressive campaign.

Another Nazi, asked whether Jews would be able to retain luxurious apartments in the west end, said:

"They will not have enough money to maintain those apartments anyway."

JUGOSLAV REGENT PROTECTED AFTER DEATH PLOT RUMOR

LONDON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Prince Paul, the Yugoslav regent, left for home today escorted by a strong guard despite repeated denials at Scotland Yard that a plot to assassinate him had been discovered.

Elaborate police precautions were in evidence at Victoria station, where the prince boarded a train for Dover at 11 a. m. Numerous special branch detectives were at the station and legation guards rode on the train.

The Daily Express this morning had taken cognizance of the plot reports emanating from the United States. It said that Scotland Yard operatives would meet the liner Queen Mary at Plymouth Wednesday to interview several passengers en route here from the United States "who were suspected of plotting against a member of a European royal household."

New York Denies Report

The plot was to have been discovered by members of the New York police department alien squad after the Queen Mary sailed from there, and the information was relayed here by the United States state department. New York police denied the report.

Princess Olga was remaining in London with her two sons who are in school. She planned to take them to Belgrade for Christmas. The prince was bound for Belgrade by way of Paris.

The Yugoslav legation denied that the prince's departure had been hastened by the plot report and the United States embassy here denied any knowledge of it.

Scotland Yard officials ridiculed the report and said Prince Paul had planned some time ago to leave London today.

NEW YORK, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Police headquarters today denied reports that the alien squad had discovered a plot to kill Prince Paul, Yugoslav regent now visiting in London, and that the assassins were enroute to England on the liner Queen Mary.

Police here said to have transmitted their information to the state department, which relayed it to Scotland Yard. Police denied having made any such report, and Thomas F. Fitch, special agent of the state department here, refused to comment.

The reports had it that the assassins were hired by Macedonian revolutionaries, the same faction that assassinated King Alexander of Yugoslavia at Marseilles in 1934.

SLAYER OF TWO REFUSES TO EAT FOOD IN PRISON

WARREN, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Nicholas Babich, 54, ex-convict who killed his wife and neighbor with a hatchet and a razor, was on a hunger strike today.

Babich told authorities: "I'm unusually strong, therefore I refuse to eat for an indefinite time."

He was arrested by deputy sheriffs at his home on state road, four miles northwest of here, about an hour after the second killing. He started his hunger strike after being placed in the Trumbull county jail. He went without food all day yesterday.

Babich, who served two terms in the Ohio penitentiary, freely related all details of the double killing to County Prosecutor Paul J. Reagan and County Secret Service Officer Joseph Luard.

He told authorities how he had an argument with his wife Sunday night, killed her, eluded a posse of police for four hours, then killed his former employer, Dan Gross, 50, by slashing his throat with a razor.

Sheriff H. L. Myers of Sandusky county said that Robert Brown, 19, a Chicago hitch-hiker, had confessed to the holdup and slaying of Marshal Fowler.

When Billings went around to the driver's window of the car after putting in the gasoline, a single-barrel, sawed-off shotgun was pointed at him.

"Put up your hands," the man commanded.

Then a truck went by on the highway and the bandit told Billings to put his hands down so, as to attract no attention. He ordered Billings to throw his money in the back seat of the car. Billings tossed 73 cents on the seat.

The man asked him if he had a telephone. Billings said there was one in the station.

"Don't call anybody for 10 minutes," the man said, as he drove away.

The bandit car headed West. Billings immediately called Sandusky and Bellevue authorities and Marshal Fowler.

Details of the disaster were not immediately available.

The colliery is owned by the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal company.

First reports said that the train, carrying 50 men, went out of control, and crashed to the bottom of the mine. The train was descending into the pit at the time of the accident.

ARMY OFFICIALS FAVOR TRAINING FOR C. C. C. UNITS

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—(UP)—High army and war department officials said today that they favor military training of Civilian Conservation Corps workers.

Growing tension in Europe, enlargement of European armies and air forces, added to apprehension over economic penetration of South America by totalitarian nations were cited as reasons for building up this country's fighting reserves.

The officials said they expected that any proposal to train C. C. C. recruits would encounter opposition in congress.

Rep. May, D., Ky., chairman of the house military affairs committee, said he favored the proposal when it was made on a previous occasion, but declined to define his current stand on the proposition.

"I am going to confer with naval and war department officials and will then have a statement to make on the C. C. C. matter and others connected with national defense," May said.

John Thomas Taylor, legislative agent of the American Legion in Washington, said that he believes his organization will back the "fine proposal" almost 100 percent.

MRS. OLIVE RANDOLPH COLBY

HAROLD F. MCCORMICK AND PRESENT WIFE

ALLEGING breach of promise, Mrs. Olive Randolph Colby, 51, of Kansas City, widow of a prominent New York sportsman, has sued Harold F. McCormick, the Chicago reaper magnate, for $2,000,000. The suit alleged McCormick promised to marry Mrs. Colby in Chicago on Feb. 20, 1933, and again in September of that year, but that on Dec. 6, 1933, he told her he would not marry her. McCormick, son of the inventor of the reaper, took his third bride last May. She was Miss Adah Wilson, a nurse who had attended the 66 year old millionaire through an attack of arthritis. She was 34. Reached by reporters at Phoenix, Ariz., where they are wintering, McCormick declined to comment on the suit. His personal counsel in Chicago, John P. Wilson, Sr., issued this statement: "We know all about the suit. There is no basis for it all. That's all we'll say now."

FIREMEN NEEDING MANY MORE TOYS; SCHOOLS TO JOIN IN CAMPAIGN

Wednesday and Thursday have been set aside by school authorities as "Toy Days" for Circleville school children. All children who have discarded toys in their homes, playthings that may bring joy to some more unfortunate children, are urged to take them to their respective schools where firemen will call for them.

Circleville's firefighters, who have been rebuilding and painting toys for needy children for the last several years, declared Tuesday that they are faced with a more difficult problem this year than ever before. "If we are to meet the demands of the city's poorer children," one said Tuesday, "we must have many, many more toys. Our supply right now is less than half the size that it had attained this time a year ago. The demand from poor families for toys is greater. Unless children of Circleville who have toys about their homes come to our aid there are going to be many unhappy children on Christmas day."

All schools will have places set aside for toys to be placed. Any toys, dolls, wagons, tricycles, other wheel toys, doll carriages, etc. are needed. "We can fix a toy," the spokesman said, "no matter how badly wrecked it may seem." The department has been equipped with many modern tools for repair of the various playthings received.

Firemen urged persons who have no way to get their toys to the engine house to call No. 32. A car will be sent to collect any toys that are available.

The firefighters will gather the toys from the schools Thursday afternoon.

EXECUTION IS WEDNESDAY

Governor May Save Woman, Or Refuse To Supersede Action Of Courts

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Daniel S. Earhart, executive secretary to Governor Martin L. Davey, said today that the governor had received "a thin trickle" of protests against execution of Anna Marie Hahn, scheduled to die in the electric chair Wednesday night.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Gov. Martin L. Davey may decide today whether to let Anna Marie Hahn die in the electric chair tomorrow night or commute her sentence to life imprisonment.

He said his decision, whatever it is, would dispose of the case completely, that he would grant no stay of execution to the 32 year old murderess, who for more than a year has been under sentence of death, the only woman among 4,100 convicts at the state prison here. The women's reformatory at Marysville has no execution chamber and Ohio has not executed a woman since 1844.

Awaiting the verdict, Mrs. Hahn found solace in her 12 year old son, Oscar, who was permitted to visit several times daily in her cell in the chapel building, which she has furnished with a rocking chair, curtains for the barred windows, a radio and pictures.

Both she and the boy clung to the hope that the governor would save her life. The boy appeared at a clemency hearing before the (Continued on Page Two)

CITY'S HOLIDAY PROGRAM AIRED BY BUSINESSMEN

Chamber of Commerce officials, Tuesday noon, discussed the city's general holiday program when they gathered in the American hotel. Additional decorations for the business district are contemplated by the organization if some of the Christmas decoration fund is left after current bills are paid.

Members generally were pleased with the business district decorations, but several expressed opinions that more decorations are needed.

Karl J. Herrmann, commander of Howard Hall post American Legion, announced that Lawrence J. Johnson had been appointed chairman of the Legion's Christmas tree party committee. The Chamber of Commerce and Legion cooperate to provide the annual Christmas tree party at the courthouse. Other members of the Legion committee include Mack Parrett, Jr., Henry Mason, William Betts, Jr., and Forrest Short.

Part of the money contributed by merchants for the holiday decorations will go toward the Christmas tree party.

A delegation from the Chamber of Commerce will attend the meeting this evening of the Pickaway county Agricultural society.

WIDOW OF LOST FLIER ASKS $300,000 DAMAGES

Mrs. Cleo L. Musick, 36, charged "carelessness, negligence and recklessness" on the part of the company as having been responsible for the clipper's going down with all hands near Pago Pago. Musick, a veteran flier, was in command of the big flying boat and was earning a $10,000 a year salary on which she was dependent, the widow said.

governor's secretary last week and asked for his mother's life as a "Christmas present."

Called 'Modern Borgia'

State's attorneys opposed the plea for mercy. They described Mrs. Hahn as a modern Borgia, who had met old men in beer parlors, fed them a slow poison, won their confidence by pretending to nurse them back to health, and then stole their savings after they had died. She was convicted of only one murder, that of Jacob Wagner, 78, of Cincinnati, but it was believed she had poisoned four to six others. Her methods were so cunning it was only by accident that she was even suspected.

She was first arrested in Cincinnati Aug. 10, 1937, at the request of Colorado Springs, Colo., authorities who charged her with having stolen two rings from a hotel. Colorado authorities included information that she and Oscar had gone to Colorado with George Obendorfer, 67, a Cincinnati co-bor, and that Obendorfer had died there.

When she was put through the police line-up in Cincinnati, Lieut. George Schatte recognized her as the woman he had questioned when Wagner died the previous June 3. On the basis of that coincidence, Wagner's body was exhumed and it was found that he had been poisoned.

As a result of subsequent investigations, Mrs. Hahn was also indicted for the murder of George Gsellman, 67, but was not tried on that charge.

She is a native of Fuesen, Germany. Later she migrated to the United States, married Peter Hahn, a telegrapher.

Name Forged to Will

It was charged that she spent much time at Cincinnati race tracks, and that the motive for the murders was to get more money to gamble. After Wagner's death, she allegedly forged his name to a will making her his beneficiary.

YOUNGSTOWN, Dec. 6—(UP)—The Wickliffe women's federal Democratic club today sent a telegram to Gov. Martin L. Davey, recommending clemency for Anna Marie Hahn, scheduled to die in the electric chair.

"The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away. We pray that you give Mrs. Hahn's son his mother for a Christmas present," the telegram read.

FRENCH, GERMAN ENVOYS ATTACH NAMES TO PACT

PARIS, Dec. 6.—(UP)—The foreign ministers of Germany and France today signed a cream-colored sheet of sheepskin parchment pledging the two historic enemies to meet at a conference table instead of resorting to war for settlement of their disputes.

The document—signed by Nazi Foreign Minister Joachim Von Ribbentrop and French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet on the spot where the Briand-Kellogg anti-war treaty was initiated a decade ago—may profoundly affect future European relations. But only future developments will demonstrate whether it will become an historic document or a political gesture.

It's formal purpose is to pledge both nations to outlaw war as an instrument in settling disputes. It bears no time limit. Hence the two powers agree to recognize their present common frontier along the Rhine after generations of sporadic warfare.

SIX OF FINEST HORSES NAMED FOR WIDENER

MIAMI, Dec. 6—(UP)—A field of 78 thoroughbreds, including the "big six" of the year, was named today for the fourth running of the $50,000 added Widener challenge cup March 4 at Hialeah park.

Heading nomination for the race, which easily could be the greatest ever staged on an American track, were Seabiscuit, War Admiral, Lawrin, Stagehand, Dauber and Pastureized. A member of that sextet won every important race of the year.

Although 78 were nominated for the mile and a quarter test, the starting field probably will be around 20 and it was considered extremely doubtful that all of the "big six" would go to the post. Weights will be announced January 4.

CACTUS JACK'S FRIENDS LAUNCH BOOM FOR 1940

DETROIT, Tex., Dec. 6—(UP)—Friends of Vice President John Nance Garner rally today to "draft" him as a presidential candidate for 1940.

They were led by Roy Miller, of Corpus Christi, a life-long friend, and by Tom De Berry, member of the Texas board of control and another friend of long standing.

Others, who went to school with Garner in this northeast Texas community 50 years ago, helped arrange the convention which drew political leaders from over the state and took on the nature of a "homecoming." Detroit was swelled to twice its normal 1500 population last night as the vanguard arrived and sponsors predicted that 5,000 would be here by 2 p. m.

Garner neither attended nor sanctioned the movement. He remained at his Uvalde home and made no statement. But the overall clad farmers and the townsmen who were his boyhood companions were unconcerned. One said:

"Wal, he hasn't said yes—but then he hasn't said no, either."

WHEAT EXPERTS SEE HUGE DROP IN '39 HARVEST

CHICAGO, Dec. 6—(UP)—Private crop experts today forecast an average 1939 winter wheat yield of 524,000,000 bushels, more than 150,000,000 bushels less than this year's harvest.

The experts estimated the average sown to winter wheat at approximately 46,750,000 acres compared with 57,316,000 acres seeded in the fall of 1937.

The government acreage reduction program and prolonged drought in the southwest wheat belt this fall were held responsible for the poorest outlook since 1935 when the winter wheat harvest was 465,319,000 bushels. The 10-year 1927-36 average production was 546,396,000 bushels.

CHICAGO HIKER ADMITS KILLING OHIO MARSHAL

Clyde Officer Shot To Death Trying To Catch Robber

within a few minutes. While he was talking with Billings, a car went by, headed East.

"There he goes," Billings shouted.

Fowler started after the car. After a chase of several miles, Fowler drew along side the other car, a mile and a half east of Clyde, commanded the driver to stop.

A charge from the shotgun struck the right side of Fowler's face. He died instantly, according to Dr. D. W. Phil, coroner. His car careened to the left and came to a stop upright in a shallow ditch. The other car went on.

Charles Ross, a truck driver who was following the two cars, heard the shot. Ross turned around, went to Clyde and reported the shooting. An ambulance was sent for Fowler and a police radio call was sent out from Fremont.

Caught in Bellevue

In Bellevue, Patrolman Henry Andrews sighted the bandit car. He chased it for several blocks and finally stopped Brown. He asked Brown why he made no attempt to shoot him. Brown replied that he couldn't get the old shell out of the gun.

Brown was turned over to Sandusky county authorities because the shooting occurred in that county.

He told Sheriff Myers that he stole the automobile in Perrysburg, O., 31 miles west of here. The license number on the car—FJ46—had been issued to L. E. Jacobs, Perrysburg.

Brown told officers that Fowler's car came up behind him and the horn was sounded several times. He said he thought it was a motorist wanting to pass and that he pulled over to let the car pass. When he saw it was an officer, he fired the shotgun. He said both cars were going about 45 miles an hour at the time.

Formal charges were to be placed against Brown later.

Dr. Phil said 100-buckshot had struck Fowler.

Sons, Daughter Survive
Fowler was a widower, recently appointed night marshal of Clyde, a town seven miles east of here. He is survived by three sons and a daughter.

TWO OHIO ROAD JOBS ABANDONED FOR "ECONOMY"

VAN WERT, Dec. 6—(UP)—Ira P. Tossey, Van Wert county superintendent of highways for eight years, admitted today that his position had been abolished as of Dec. 1.

Tossey declined to comment on the reason for his dismissal but it was learned that the dismissal order specified "for reasons of economy."

Tossey is under classified civil service. He did not reveal whether he plans to appeal the abolishment order.

Tossey's daughter, Mrs. Luther Gunst, was secretary to Charles Sawyer, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor in the Nov. 8 election.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6—(UP)—State Highway Director Ivan R. Ault said today the positions of superintendent of highways in Van Wert county and general superintendent for highway division No. 9 at Chillicothe were being abolished for "economy reasons."

Both positions are in the classified civil service. The order discharged Ambers Dillon of Ironton from the job at Chillicothe and Ira P. Tossey at Van Wert.

The highways personnel office said Edison Ellis, Van Wert, resident engineer, would assume Tossey's duties.

Rabbit Fever Described by Health Society

By DR. A. D. BLACKBURN
Health Commissioner

Tularaemia is an infectious disease caused by the bacterium tularaense. It is primarily a disease of wild rabbits and hares, and usually proves fatal to these animals. Ground squirrels, wild rats and wild mice also have the disease. The disease is transmitted from rabbit to rabbit by such blood sucking insects as lice, flies and ticks.

The disease is transmitted to man by the contamination of the hands or the membranes of the internal organs or the body fluids of infected rabbits. The housewife or cook dressing rabbits for the table, the market man skinning or dressing rabbits for market, and the hunter dressing rabbits at the end of a day's hunt lay themselves liable to infection if handling diseased animals. The infection enters through an abrasion of the skin of the hands or it may enter through the unbroken skin. Man may also contract the disease by the bite of a horsefly or wood tick whose host had previously been a tularaemic rabbit or other rodent. The soiled hand of a person who has dressed a rabbit may come in contact with the conjunctiva of his eye and the eye will then be the focus of infection. No instance has been reported of the spread of the infection from man to man by mere contact. Laboratory workers have been infected by handling diseased rodents or the internal organs of these animals. The meat from infected rabbits, if thoroughly cooked, does not constitute a source of infection and produces no bad effects.

The symptoms in the human type of the disease appear in from one to ten days after infection. The average period of incubation in 259 reported cases was three and one-half days. The onset of the disease is sudden, and is manifested characteristically by headache, vomiting, chills, aching body pains, sweating, prostration and fever. The symptoms and pathology of the disease will not be discussed here.

Convalescence from the disease is slow. It is rare for a patient to be at work at the end of a month. Some patients have not fully recovered at the end of six months or a year. The disease is sometimes fatal. Of 679 cases reported, 24 terminated in death.

Preventive measures. Always use rubber gloves in dressing or handling rabbits or other susceptible rodents. Hunters should not shoot rabbits sitting. Rabbits that are lively are less apt to be afflicted with disease.

for lunch, the students massed in hundreds to show their anger toward France.

They paraded to such hotels as the Excelsior and Ambassador, and pointing to signs like "Cafe" and "The Dansant," shouted:

"Put them in Italian! No French words in Rome!"

They got as close to the French embassy as they could, crowding into side streets, and shouted for Corsica, Tunis and Djibouti. They went then to the Venice square in hope that Premier Benito Mussolini might appear on the balcony from which he often speaks. He did not appear and after waiting 10 minutes the students left.

Small demonstrations by groups of students and young Fascists were reported all over the city. The demonstrators wandered through main streets, shouting slogans against France and demands for Tunis.

One group saw an automobile with a German license plate on it, and shouted, "Heil Hitler!"

FRISCH TO WIN PLACE IN GIANT TEAM'S ROSTER

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 6—(UP)—Rumors outnumbered facts today as major and minor league baseball owners, scouts, managers and executives gathered for the minor league convention opening tomorrow.

One report was that Frankie Frisch, the former Fordham flash who was disposed as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, might return to the New York Giants, where he became a star player.

It was said that Bill Terry, Giant manager, practically has clinched a working agreement with New Orleans in the Southern association and that Pancho Snyder, Giant coach, would manage the Pelicans. In that case Frisch could very easily be hired to replace Snyder.

CACTUS JACK'S FRIENDS LAUNCH BOOM FOR 1940

DETROIT, Tex., Dec. 6—(UP)—Friends of Vice President John Nance Garner rally today to "draft" him as a presidential candidate for 1940.

They were led by Roy Miller, of Corpus Christi, a life-long friend, and by Tom De Berry, member of the Texas board of control and another friend of long standing.

Others, who went to school with Garner in this northeast Texas community 50 years ago, helped arrange the convention which drew political leaders from over the state and took on the nature of a "homecoming." Detroit was swelled to twice its normal 1500 population last night as the vanguard arrived and sponsors predicted that 5,000 would be here by 2 p. m.

Garner neither attended nor sanctioned the movement. He remained at his Uvalde home and made no statement. But the overall clad farmers and the townsmen who were his boyhood companions were unconcerned. One said:

"Wal, he hasn't said yes—but then he hasn't said no, either."

WHEAT EXPERTS SEE HUGE DROP IN '39 HARVEST

CHICAGO, Dec. 6—(UP)—Private crop experts today forecast an average 1939 winter wheat yield of 524,000,000 bushels, more than 150,000,000 bushels less than this year's harvest.

The experts estimated the average sown to winter wheat at approximately 46,750,000 acres compared with 57,316,000 acres seeded in the fall of 1937.

The government acreage reduction program and prolonged drought in the southwest wheat belt this fall were held responsible for the poorest outlook since 1935 when the winter wheat harvest was 465,319,000 bushels. The 10-year 1927-36 average production was 546,396,000 bushels.

CHICAGO HIKER ADMITS KILLING OHIO MARSHAL

Clyde Officer Shot To Death Trying To Catch Robber

"There he goes," Billings shouted. Fowler started after the car. After a chase of several miles, Fowler drew along side the other car, a mile and a half east of Clyde, commanded the driver to stop.

A charge from the shotgun struck the right side of Fowler's face. He died instantly, according to Dr. D. W. Phile, coroner. His car careened to the left and came to a stop upright in a shallow ditch. The other car went on.

Charles Ross, a truck driver who was following the two cars, heard the shot. Ross turned around, went to Clyde and reported the shooting. An ambulance was sent for Fowler and a police radio call was sent out from Fremont.

Caught in Bellevue

In Bellevue, Patrolman Henry Andrews sighted the bandit car. He chased it for several blocks and finally stopped Brown. He asked Brown why he made no attempt to shoot him. Brown replied that he couldn't get the old shell out of the gun.

Brown was turned over to Sandusky county authorities because the shooting occurred in that county.

He told Sheriff Myers that he stole the automobile in Perrysburg, O., 31 miles west of here. The license number on the car—FJ46—had been issued to L. E. Jacobs, Perrysburg.

Brown told officers that Fowler's car came up behind him and the horn was sounded several times. He said he thought it was a motorist wanting to pass and that he pulled over to let the car pass. When he saw it was an officer, he fired the shotgun. He said both cars were going about 45 miles an hour at the time.

Formal charges were to be placed against Brown later.

Dr. Philo said 100 buckshot had struck Fowler.

SONS, DAUGHTER SURVIVE

Fowler was a widower, recently appointed night marshal of Clyde, a town seven miles east of here. He is survived by three sons and a daughter.

TWO OHIO ROAD JOBS ABANDONED FOR "ECONOMY"

VAN WERT, Dec. 6—(UP)—Ira P. Tossey, Van Wert county superintendent of highways for eight years, admitted today that his position had been abolished as of Dec. 1.

Tossey declined to comment on the reason for his dismissal but it was learned that the dismissal order specified "for reasons of economy."

Tossey is under classified civil service. He did not reveal whether he plans to appeal the abolishment order.

Tossey's daughter, Mrs. Luther Gunsett, was secretary to Charles Sawyer, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor in the Nov. 8 election.

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6—(UP)—State Highway Director Ivan R. Ault said today the positions of superintendent of highways in Van Wert county and general superintendent for highway division No. 9 at Chillicothe were being abolished for "economy reasons."

Both positions are in the classified civil service. The order discharged Ambers Dillon of Ironton from the job at Chillicothe and Ira P. Tossey at Van Wert.

The highways personnel office said Edison Ellis, Van Wert, resident engineer, would assume Tossey's duties.

Rabbit Fever Described by Health SOCIETY

By DR. A. D. BLACKBURN
Health Commissioner

Tularaemia is an infectious disease caused by the Bacterium tularensis. It is primarily a disease of wild rabbits and hares, and usually proves fatal to these animals.

Ground squirrels, wild rats and wild mice also have the disease. The disease is transmitted from rabbit to rabbit by such blood sucking insects as lice, flies and ticks.

The disease is transmitted to man by the contamination of the hands or the membranes of the eye with portions of the internal organs or the body fluids of infected rabbits. The housewife or cook dressing rabbits for the table, the market man skinning or dressing rabbits for market, and the hunter dressing rabbits at the end of a day's hunt lay themselves liable to infection if handling diseased animals. The infection enters through an abrasion of the skin of the hands or it may enter through the unbroken skin. Man may also contract the disease by the bite of a horsefly or wood tick whose host had previously been a tularaemic rabbit or other rodent. The soiled hand of a person who has dressed a rabbit may come in contact with the conjunctiva of his eye and the eye will then be the focus of infection. No instance has been reported of the spread of the infection from man to man by mere contact. Laboratory workers have been infected by handling diseased rodents or the internal organs of these animals. The meat from infected rabbits, if thoroughly cooked, does not constitute a source of infection and produces no bad effects.

The symptoms in the human type of the disease appear in from one to ten days after infection. The average period of incubation in 259 reported cases was three and one-half days. The onset of the disease is sudden, and is manifested characteristically by headache, vomiting, chilliness, aching bodily pains, sweating, prostration and fever. The symptoms and pathology of the disease will not be discussed here.

Convalescence from the disease is slow. It is rare for a patient to be at work at the end of a month. Some patients have not fully recovered at the end of six months or a year. The disease is sometimes fatal. Of 679 cases reported, 24 terminated in death.

Preventive measures. Always use rubber gloves in dressing or handling rabbits or other susceptible rodents. Hunters should not shoot rabbits sitting. Rabbits that are lively are less apt to be afflicted with disease.

WHEELER WARNS U. S. AGAINST MASS HYSTERIA

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 6—(UP)—The United States must guard against mass hysteria, Sen. Burton K. Wheeler, D., Mont., said in a speech here last night.

"The people of Germany were swept into Nazism as a result of hysterical reaction to economic depression," he said. "We, in America must look out for similar waves of hysteria. I myself have seen such waves sweep over this country, and sometimes I wonder if we ourselves are not going the way of Europe."

Police, Soldiers Protect Paris' Embassy After Demonstration

They paraded to such hotels as the Excelsior and Ambassador, and pointing to signs like "Cafe" and "The Dancant," shouted:

"Put them in Italian! No French words in Rome!"

They got as close to the French embassy as they could, crowding into side streets, and shouted for Corsica, Tunis and Djibouti.

They went then to the Venice square in hope that Premier Benito Mussolini might appear on the balcony from which he often speaks. He did not appear and after waiting 10 minutes the students left.

Small demonstrations by groups of students and young Fascists were reported all over the city. The demonstrators wandered through main streets, shouting slogans against France, and demands for Tunis.

One group saw an automobile with a German license plate on it, and shouted, "Heil Hitler!"

FRISCH TO WIN PLACE IN GIANT TEAM'S ROSTER

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 6—(UP)—Rumors outnumbered facts today as major and minor league baseball owners, scouts, managers and executives gathered for the minor league convention opening tomorrow.

One report was that Frankie Frisch, the former Fordham flash who was disposed as manager of the St. Louis Cardinals, might return to the New York Giants, where he became a star player.

It was said that Bill Terry, Giant manager, practically has clinched a working agreement with New Orleans in the Southern association and that Pancho Snyder, Giant coach, would manage the Pelicans. In that case Frisch could very easily be hired to replace Snyder.

O'BRIEN TO GET HEISMAN TROPHY AS GRID'S BEST

NEW YORK, Dec. 6—(UP)—Davey O'Brien, 150-pound quarterback from Texas Christian University who has been voted by many as the year's outstanding football player, receives the John W. Heisman memorial trophy tonight. Six hundred experts throughout the country chose O'Brien as the most valuable player of the year over such stars as Marshall Goldberg of Pittsburgh, Sid Luckman of Columbia, Bob MacLeod of Dartmouth and Vic Bottari of California.

CREW OF NAZI PLANE RESCUED AS CRAFT SINKS

Operators Of Fishing Boats

Take Five Airmen Aboard After Mishap

MANILA, Dec. 6—(UP)—A German Good-Will monoplane which flew to Tokyo in record time made a forced landing in the sea off the Philippine islands today on a Tokyo-Manila flight, first stage of its return flight to Berlin.

Fishermen rescued the members of the crew, and authorities here ordered an amphibian plane to proceed to the scene and bring them on to Manila.

The four-motored plane, the Condor, which made a record round trip flight between Berlin and New York last August, had flown from Berlin to Tokyo in 46 hours 43 minutes.

It left Tokyo for Manila at 5:37 a. m. today. Its crew had planned to remain here overnight and fly on to Batavia, Java, tomorrow.

Trouble Reported

At 3:30 p. m., half an hour before it was due here, the plane radioed that it was experiencing motor trouble over Cavite, up the coast.

The message added that the plane hoped to land at Nielson airport within 10 minutes.

An hour passed. There was no sign of the plane and there was no response to anxious messages from the airport. It was decided to send out rescue planes.

Capt. Mark Lewis, American army aviator, in a search plane, flew up the coast. About 100 feet off the village of Rosario, 30 miles from Manila on Luzon island, Lewis saw the plane settling in the water. It had landed among a group of Filipino fishing boats which picked up the members of the crew just before the plane sank until only its tip part was visible.

Apparently the crew had tried to land the plane on the beach. It was believed that it could be salvaged.

Manila dispatches mentioned a crew of five. Members of the plane crew are Capt. Alfred Henke and Capt. Rudolf Von Moreau, pilots; Paul Dierberg, radio engineer; Walter Kohe, radio man, and George Kohner. However, it was believed that Henz Junge, director of the Focke-Wulf company, owners of the plane, also was aboard.

MAN WHO CURED MANY CROSSED EYE CASES DIES

CLEVELAND, Dec. 6—(UP)—Dr. F. W. Mitchell, 61, director and operating surgeon of the Cross Eyes Clinic, Inc., died yesterday of injuries suffered in an automobile accident a week ago.

Edward Younger, president of the clinic, said Dr. Mitchell, a native of Marietta, had cured "approximately 5,000 cases of crossed eyes in the last five years," and that much of his work had been done without cost to his patients.

Dr. Mitchell's death occurred just prior to the arrival here of Rex Beach, author and magazine writer, who had intended to interview him.

"I was going to look into his extraordinary useful work," Beach said. "I understand he had no regard for reward and in numerous cases failed to send bills."

One of the few old time horse and live stock doctors yet living is William Schooley at Commercial Point. He was in at "head-quarters" a few days ago, and while having lived a good while one can guess by his conversation that he intends living a good while longer. He then had several horses under his care and had plenty to do yet that day.

Met Frank Dum here a couple of days ago on his way to the county seat where he had some matters to look after concerning the school tax levy for his, Madison township. Frank is a member of that school board and also its clerk. The new brick addition, strictly modern, that the board now has under construction is "coming along fine and under roof," he said. The building is, according to contracts, to be ready for occupancy by not later than February 1, 1939.

Joe Cooper Crow now has some new play mates in the live forms of a couple of homing pigeons which was turned over to Mrs. Cooper for good care several days ago by Herb Swayers at whose home they came for a few days' rest and food. Mrs. Cooper says the birds are banded and evidently have been turned loose at some point maybe some considerable distance away. If these travelers are aware of the good home they have, they'll be staying for some time right where they are.

Perry Stoltz, who has spent some months here, is now headed for the South where he will install many units of his play board, "Go-Ball." It is now constructed for indoor use and looks as if it should meet with much success.

A stove well filled with coal and red hot most all over, helps a lot to take the chill off these cool mornings and that's fine, but if it takes a notion to go on a sit down strike and topples over on the bare wooden floor, that isn't quite so fine and something must be done about it in a hurry—no foolin' with the Davey guards this time. Enough good helpers were called pronto and the trouble was corrected. This all happened around at one of the stoves and other than a lot of smoke and mess, not much damage was done.

More than the usual number of people were in the village Monday for the annual meeting of the fire association. The forenoon was mostly devoted to the discussion of the provisions of the policies as now issued. The afternoon business included the election of three directors for a term of three years. The three now serving, Lewis Barch, Ira Fisher, and W. A. Smalley and whose time of service had expired, were re-elected. Albert Worthington, Grove City, president of the Association, presided. The nine directors are Albert Worthington, Ira Fisher, Lewis Barch, S. E. Beers, Will E. Sitterly, Frank Valentine, M. G. Steely, W. Smalley, Paul W. Teegardin. This association was incorporated March 4, 1904 and has in force now more than 2800 policies covering risks of more than $11,000,000.

21,000 GO BACK TO WORK AFTER STRIKE IS ENDED

FLINT, Mich., Dec. 6—(UP)—Twenty-one thousand workers return to their jobs today, ending a strike in the Fisher body plant No. 1.

Employees at the plant voted last night to accept terms of an agreement between the United Automobile Workers and General Motors Corporation, of which the Fisher concern is a subsidiary. Union and corporation officials scheduled negotiations in Detroit in an effort to reach a "sound and equitable basis" for putting piece workers in two departments on day wages.

Henry Wilson, president of local 581 of the union, said the workers reserved the right to strike again Friday if results of the negotiations proved unsatisfactory.

The agreement was reached by Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. and officials of General Motors yesterday, and the strikers were supposed to have returned to work late yesterday afternoon. Wilson said, however, that the workers wanted to take a vote on the agreement before reopening the plant.

The plant shut down Friday, forcing 6,400 employees out of work. The strike forced the Buick plant, which uses Fisher bodies, to close also and an additional 14,000 men had no work. The Pontiac Fisher plant final assembly line in Pontiac also was forced to shut down because of a shortage of materials. An estimated 600 men were made idle there.

Martin said he was confident the difficulties could be settled. He said the strike was called "as a result of a misunderstanding."

FARM NEWS

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

Farmers' Week at Ohio State university is scheduled for January 30 to February 3. The program will contain something of value for every member of every farm family in Ohio.

Plant breeders are now trying to improve hay and pasture grasses by the same processes that produced hybrid corn but the job ahead probably is more difficult than that which faced the men who perfected corn hybrids.

Efficient crop production is directly dependent upon yields per acre. Low yields create high unit costs of production, but there is a limit beyond which the cost of increasing yields is greater than the value of the extra crop produced.

Account books developed especially for use in Ohio can be obtained from all county agricultural agents in the state. The agents also will explain how to take farm inventories and start the books so an accurate record of the year's business will be available.

The world's tobacco pouch is overstuffed right now, and Ohio

farmers are interested in the fact that the past crop of burley tobacco was 50 million pounds in excess of normal consumption. Producers will vote on December 17 to decide if they want a market quota for this product in 1939.

Too much turkey hash when the family was too small to eat a big bird decreased the demand for standard-sized turkeys, so turkey growers are working on a model that will mature at a weight of from 10 to 12 pounds. Times have changed since the pioneer criticized a gobble because it was too big for one person to eat and not enough for two.

CREW OF NAZI PLANE RESCUED AS CRAFT SINKS

Goodwill Monoplane Drops In Sea Off Philippines On Berlin Return

Operators Of Fishing Boats

Take Five Airmen Aboard After Mishap

MANILA, Dec. 6—(UP)—A German Good-Will monoplane which flew to Tokyo in record time made a forced landing in the sea off the Philippine islands today on a Tokyo-Manila flight, first stage of its return flight to Berlin.

Fishermen rescued the members of the crew, and authorities here ordered an amphibian plane to proceed to the scene and bring them on to Manila.

The four-motored plane, the Condor, which made a record round trip flight between Berlin and New York last August, had flown from Berlin to Tokyo in 46 hours 43 minutes.

It left Tokyo for Manila at 5:37 a. m. today. Its crew had planned to remain here overnight and fly on to Batavia, Java, tomorrow.

Trouble Reported

At 3:30 p. m., half an hour before it was due here, the plane radioed that it was experiencing motor trouble over Cavite, up the coast.

The message added that the plane hoped to land at Nielson airport within 10 minutes.

An hour passed. There was no sign of the plane and there was no response to anxious messages from the airport. It was decided to send out rescue planes.

Capt. Mark Lewis, American army aviator, in a search plane, flew up the coast. About 100 feet off the village of Rosario, 30 miles from Manila on Luzon island, Lewis saw the plane settling in the water. It had landed among a group of Filipino fishing boats which picked up the members of the crew just before the plane sank until only its tip part was visible.

Apparently the crew had tried to land the plane on the beach. It was believed that it could be salvaged.

Manila dispatches mentioned a crew of five. Members of the plane crew were Capt. Alfred Henke and Capt. Rudolf von Moreau, pilots; Paul Dierberg, radio engineer; Walter Kohe, radio man, and George Kohner. However, it was believed that Henz Junge, director of the Focke-Wulf company, owners of the plane, also was aboard.

MAN WHO CURED MANY CROSSED EYE CASES DIES

CLEVELAND, Dec. 6—(UP)—Dr. F. W. Mitchell, 61, director and operating surgeon of the Cross Eyes Clinic, Inc., died yesterday of injuries suffered in an automobile accident a week ago.

Edward Younger, president of the clinic, said Dr. Mitchell, a native of Marietta, had cured "approximately 5,000 cases of crossed eyes in the last five years," and that much of his work had been done without cost to his patients.

Dr. Mitchell's death occurred just prior to the arrival here of Rex Beach, author and magazine writer, who had intended to interview him.

"I was going to look into his extraordinary useful work," Beach said. "I understand he had no regard for reward and in numerous cases failed to send bills."

HOCKING COUNTY SHERIFF GRILLS COX ON CHECKS

Sheriff Joe Farbeann, Hocking county, and a deputy came to Circleville Monday to question Weldon Cox, 20, of Laurelville, bound to the grand jury under a charge of forgery following his arrest after an accident Saturday night at Franklin and Mingo streets. Cox was riding in an auto with Charles Congrove, 22, Laurelville, who was fatally injured in the accident.

Police Chief William McCrady said Cox admitted to the sheriff he had passed a number of bad checks. Cox will be held in Circleville.

One of the few old time horse and live stock doctors yet living is William Schooley at Commercial Point. He was in at "head-quarters" a few days ago, and while having lived a good while one can guess by his conversation that he intends living a good while longer. He then had several horses under his care and had plenty to do yet that day.

Met Frank Dum here a couple of days ago on his way to the county seat where he had some matters to look after concerning the school tax levy for his Madison township. Frank is a member of that school board and also its clerk. The new brick addition, strictly modern, that the board now has under construction is "coming along fine and under roof," he said. The building is, according to contracts, to be ready for occupancy by not later than February 1, 1939.

Joe Cooper Crow now has some new play mates in the live forms of a couple of homing pigeons which was turned over to Mrs. Cooper for good care several days ago by Herb Swayers at whose home they came for a few days' rest and food. Mrs. Cooper says the birds are banded and evidently have been turned loose at some point maybe some considerable distance away. If these travelers are aware of the good home they have, they'll be staying for some time right where they are.

Perry Stoltz, who has spent some months here, is now headed for the South where he will install many units of his play board, "Go-Ball." It is now constructed for indoor use and looks as if it should meet with much success.

A stove well filled with coal and red hot most all over, helps a lot to take the chill off these cool mornings and that's fine, but if it takes a notion to go on a sit down strike and topples over on the bare wooden floor, that isn't quite so fine and something must be done about it in a hurry—no foolin' with the Davey goods this time. Enough good helpers were called pronto and the trouble was corrected. This all happened around at one of the stoves and other than a lot of smoke and mess, not much damage was done.

21,000 GO BACK TO WORK AFTER STRIKE IS ENDED

FLINT, Mich., Dec. 6—(UP)—Twenty-one thousand workers return to their jobs today, ending a strike in the Fisher body plant No. 1. Employees at the plant voted last night to accept terms of an agreement between the United Automobile Workers and General Motors Corporation, of which the Fisher concern is a subsidiary. Union and corporation officials scheduled negotiations in Detroit in an effort to reach a "sound and equitable basis" for putting piece workers in two departments on day wages. Henry Wilson, president of local 581 of the union, said the workers reserved the right to strike again Friday if results of the negotiations proved unsatisfactory. The agreement was reached by Homer Martin, president of the U. A. W. and officials of General Motors yesterday, and the strikers were supposed to have returned to work late yesterday afternoon. Wilson said, however, that the workers wanted to take a vote on the agreement before reopening the plant. The plant shut down Friday, forcing 8,400 employees out of work. The strike forced the Buick plant, which uses Fisher bodies, to close also and an additional 14,000 men had no work. The Pontiac Fisher plant final assembly line in Pontiac also was forced to shut down because of a shortage of materials. An estimated 600 men were made idle there. Martin said he was confident the difficulties could be settled. He said the strike was called "as a result of a misunderstanding."

FARM NEWS

Brief Items of Interest to Pickaway Farmers

Farmers' Week at Ohio State university is scheduled for January 30 to February 3. The program will contain something of value for every member of every farm family in Ohio.

Plant breeders are now trying to improve hay and pasture grasses by the same processes that produced hybrid corn but the job ahead probably is more difficult than that which faced the men who perfected corn hybrids.

Efficient crop production is directly dependent upon yields per acre. Low yields create high unit costs of production, but there is a limit beyond which the cost of increasing yields is greater than the value of the extra crop produced.

Account books developed especially for use in Ohio can be obtained from all county agricultural agents in the state. The agents also will explain how to take farm inventories and start the books so an accurate record of the year's business will be available.

The world's tobacco pouch is overstuffed right now, and Ohio

farmers are interested in the fact that the past crop of burley tobacco was 50 million pounds in excess of normal consumption. Producers will vote on December 17 to decide if they want a market quota for this product in 1939.

Too much turkey hash when the family was too small to eat a big bird decreased the demand for standard-sized turkeys, so turkey growers are working on a model that will mature at a weight of from 10 to 12 pounds. Times have changed since the pioneer criticized a gobble because it was too big for one person to eat and not enough for two.

SELLING

A SUCCESSFUL businessman, conducting an informal school of salesmanship for a group of young men, is giving them not only technical instruction but sound principles and a rather inspiring glimpse of the future.

Two abilities all salesmen must have, he says. First, the ability to like people, because it's hard to do business with people you don't like. Second, the ability of self-control. In this he includes work, study, mental attitude and other factors.

As for opportunities this expert presents a prospect that is challenging and inspiring.

"In the last fifty years" he says "we have been doing a fine job of increasing our ability to produce goods. At the same time we have been neglecting the distribution of these goods — just as important from the standpoint of consumption, as their production is."

I have no doubt that the next twenty years will bring an emphasis on distribution, the like of which has never been seen. I want to do my part, small though it be, to increase the efficiency of distribution today."

Wider distribution and consumption of the necessities and comforts of life calls, no doubt, for more than mere salesmanship. Goods must be good, and prices must be within reach of the buyers. But the art of selling things is, in itself, a very important part of the economic process.

This process is a sort of triangle consisting of production, distribution and consumption. All three are vital.

We have mastered the production job; our industry, our agriculture and art can produce all that people need or can use. And the people are eager for a great deal more than they are getting.

The salesman is the distributing link between the other two. By selling more goods he stimulates production, makes more work, increases the ability of consumers to buy, and speeds up the whole system of producing and using wealth.

SAILORS IN CARS

IT IS good news that the gobs in Uncle Sam's navy can now swim. It has been a required skill for sailors since 1930.

That this has been a safeguard for the young men is suggested by the fact that more sailors die in automobile accidents than by drowning. With the exception of 1933, motor-vehicle accidents have been

'ROUND CIRCLEVILLE . . Hour by Hour

PAGES from the Diary of An Antiquated Reporter:

Up to a day of whimsical weather. One moment sunshine from a sky of gorgeous blue; the next massed clouds of real storm aspect. Found the news of the morning much like that, some of it of happy events, other of disaster and threatened disaster.

Clouds over Europe today are much like those clouds of ours yesterday. A brief period of sunshine after the pact at Munich and now dark clouds of war on the horizon. Germany got what it wanted by bluffing the democracies and now Italy tries it. Hitler, of course, didn't want to fight and neither does Mussolini. But either of them will fight if balked. There will be no other way out. As dictators they must maintain face, for that is about all they have. If their own folk learn that other persons will not bend to the "all highest" one then they might get notions of their own. If Europe is not engaged in war before Summer then this scrivener will be greatly surprised.

Out of the situation, however, comes one glimmer of hope. Hitler thinks that he rules the world and Mussolini takes that imagined honor to himself. Hitler does not like Mussolini's intended grab for he sees it as causing delay in his intended colony grab. So, Hitler takes it on himself to be critical of Il Duce. Mussolini will not like that even a little bit. As a result Italy and Germany may split and if they do they certainly are sunk. Their sole hope rests in a tight alliance.

This is International Golden Rule Week. That's a laugh if there ever was one. European nations have changed the Golden Rule somewhat. They believe it is "Do unto others before they do it unto you." Probably "changed" is not the word. Probably should have been "emphasized." Why, that International Golden Rule Week is about as meaningless as Father's Day.

Believe it or not, but the Red Bridge over the Scioto north-west of the village is not red at all. Wonder how many folk know its color. Met Game Warden Francis and gave him assurance that wall eye pike exist in Darby creek. He has not seen a wall eye taken from waters hereabouts, but I do know wall eyes and told him I had landed a half dozen during the Summer. So, he promised to try to obtain a shipment of wall eyes for release in Darby. The fish will not live in many streams this far south, but they do right well in our creek.

Chatted with Ernie Hill and accepted a fine gift pencil from him. And another Williamsport citizen, Mayor Bill Radcliff, our new legislator. During the morning I had received a lapel insignia of the Behind the Eight Ball club and, believing that Bill as a legislator in these difficult times will be behind the eight ball more than I could possibly be, I placed it on Bill's lapel.

In the evening did drop in at the Grand to while away a half hour. Saw both of the horror pictures long ago, but I was looking for a kid sitting alone and I found one, a boy about ten. I took my place beside him, watching and listening. When Count Dracula greeted the young Englishman and the Britisher accepted an invitation to enter the castle the boy said in a puzzled voice: "Why, what's the matter with that guy anyway? Is he nuts? Why, even a kid would know better than to go in there." When I left a few minutes later the kid was sitting on both feet, apparently fearful of leaving them dangle down there in the darkness.

Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

BY DREW PEARSON AND ROBERT S. ALLEN,

LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE BREAK

WASHINGTON—Three significant facts emerged from the meeting of the Republican National Committee:

1. That there is just as sharp a cleavage between liberals and conservatives in the GOP as there is among the Democrats.

2. That there is strong rank-and-file sentiment that Herbert Hoover and National Chairman John Hamilton must be eliminated from leadership if the party is to win in 1940.

3. That the congressional leaders, aligned with the liberals, are determined to shape their own policy in legislation and to brook no interference from the Hoover-Hamilton group.

The struggle for control between the Old Guard and Young Guard and the undercurrent of hostility toward Hoover and Hamilton are part of the same fight. There are, however, veteran leaders who oppose the young militants but at the same time agree with them that Hoover and Hamilton must be retired to the back-ground.

Privately, these Old Guards said that the National Chairman and former President had become unpopular symbols in the public mind, that the party could not afford to go into the Presidential campaign encumbered with them.

TOUGH CUSTOMER

The consensus of opinion among all groups was that no serious difficulty would be encountered in shelving Hamilton. He has never been really popular, and now estranged from Landon, the man who named him, he will be replaced sooner or later. But squelching Hoover is a different matter.

The ex-President does not hold a party office, and it is difficult to shoot at an intangible target. Also, Hoover has powerful business and political allies, is thus in a position indirectly to make his influence felt in the councils of the party even though he doesn't show his hand.

This was demonstrated by the selection of ex-Senator Dan Hastings of Delaware to the Executive Committee over Kenneth Simpson, progressive campaign manager of New York's Tom Dewey. The maneuver was put over entirely by Hoover, although he did not appear openly at any time in the bitter undercover fight.

Hoover had previously tried to stop Simpson's election as National Committee-man by the New York State Committee. Rank-and-file hostility to Hoover made itself felt and Simpson won, but in the National Committee, Hoover had no such trouble with the older party leaders.

This struggle of the GOP rank-and-file with its leaders will be intensified from now on. Its outcome may determine the fate of the party's drive to return to national control in 1940.

the leading cause of accidental deaths in the navy for the last seven years.

Perhaps it would be a good thing to extend the national traffic safety campaign to include the sailor lads.

DIET AND HEALTH

How One's Attitude Influences Sickness

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE HAVE been reviewing in the past few weeks the nervous system and the six senses. It is appropriate to go on from that subject to discuss what that part of the nervous system which we call the mind can do to influence the body in sickness and in health.

Everybody must know instances of such an effect. In fact, our common speech is full of phrases which indicate such relationship—some sort of a sight made a person "sick."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

at his stomach"; some emotion "broke my heart"; the mental processes of pity "turned his bowels to water."

Mind Plays Part

But few people realize the extent of this relationship. There is no illness in which the mind does not play a part. As a wise physician has said, "There are two things to sickness—one is the sickness itself and the other is what the patient thinks about the sickness." If you can get the patient in the proper mental attitude towards what is the matter with him, you have often won half the battle.

And much of the illness of the world is due to the patient's inability to take the proper mental attitude towards his illness. He either thinks it is more serious than it is, or else he thinks it is not as serious as it is.

We have people with all gradations of attitude. There is the woman with a little indigestion that she thinks is cancer of the stomach, which it isn't at all, but her whole life is made miserable by refusing to accept that. On the contrary, we have the man who doesn't think his diabetes is very serious and thinks it doesn't need much treatment. He goes from bad to worse, simply because he refuses to recognize the fact that he is really sick.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

FORGET YOUR HABIT

ANYBODY WHO leads an honor from a queen-jack toward an ace has a more or less fixed habit regarding the move. If his card is not covered by the king, he finesesses. If the king covers, he comes up with the ace. That may be good bridge on most occasions, but if a player is not prepared to vary that procedure in unusual spots, he may suffer the humiliation of seeing a good contract kicked away.

ROMANCE INC.

BY OREN ARNOLD

WRITTEN FOR AND RELEASED BY CENTRAL PRESS ASSOCIATION

CHAPTER 39

NOW THERE are two or three ways to get rid of your rival if you are a woman in love and without compassion.

"You can take the rival out in a boat, for instance, and maneuver to drown her. It has been done. It is quite effective in that it removes the competition from the scene forever. It is as effective, and not nearly as messy as shooting or stabbing or poisoning."

But none of these is entirely perfect as a modus operandi. The law doesn't approve. And, even though the law could be circumvented (as it frequently can be), the man himself wouldn't necessarily erase the departed one from his heart. A much better, safer way would be to contrive some plan whereby the rival is discredited in the eyes of the man himself.

This latter thought had occupied the best attention that Peaches Pomeroy could give it. Peaches had some powerful weapons at her command. Among them was money.

Could she hire some woman to lure Bob Towne away from Sara Sue Davis? Possibly, but that still wouldn't leave Bob's heart free; he would be just shifting his attention to another woman, not herself.

Could she hire some man to lure the Davis person away from Bob? No, because that would only stimulate Bob's own energies, make him woo Sara Sue all the more ardently. Bob already had competition, and hadn't quit.

What, then, could Peaches do?

If Sara Sue Davis could just be compromised—

If she could be suddenly exposed in an embarrassing situation with some man, then Bob Towne would discover that she was unfaithful and so—

But it is difficult to compromise anybody. It means hiring someone to do it. It means that the plot can backfire on you, revealing your part in it to your complete embarrassment and detriment. And besides that, Peaches had to admit herself that the Davis woman was clever. Sara Sue enjoyed a most wholesome and clean reputation; she wouldn't likely be caught napping.

Peaches had been giving bitter thought to these details. Even to the possibility of destroying Sara Sue in an "accident." She shied promptly off the latter, however, for she was inherently a coward. But she was a shrewd, scheming one, and when she sat alone at the dance, idly twisting her diamond bracelet, she had her sudden inspiration.

She felt at once that her idea was sound.

It could be worked easily. It would involve no accomplices. It would discredit Sara Sue in a most logical way, publicly, scandalously.

Sara Sue was known to be a widow. Widows are traditionally destitute. In fact, Sara Sue herself had set out to earn a living with her so-called Counsel in Romance. (Peaches referred to it contemptuously, even in her thoughts.) It should be easy for people to believe that Sara Sue was in dire need of money. Yes, it seemed like an excellent plan.

"I wish I had a drink first,"

Peaches murmured.

But she got up from the divan in the women's lounge, and went immediately to set her plan in operation.

It would seem that a married man could enjoy a modicum of respect from his associates. Married life is supposed to entail a certain dignity. A married man is supposed to be mature. But—no hum. Not if you are a freshman. Not if your whirlwind romance and elopement has been a fillip of pleasure for everybody on a college campus. Not if you are rather popular, and you and your pretty bride are just 18 years old.

Mister Worthington Gurley, married man, had suffered interminably (but not unpleasantly) from sophomores. These latter tyrants had felt duty bound to give him extra attention when he stole away the sweetest girl in the freshman class. When he returned to the campus after his elopement, for instance, he was forced to wear old shoes strung around his neck for three more—symbols of his new state.

Most of the Rice folk, therefore, came to know Worthington and Marcia Gurley. But Peaches Pomeroy did not. Peaches knew Marcia by sight, but she had never been conscious of Worthington. The latter was a mere freshman, a slime, beneath her notice socially; one of the noisy crowd that clutter up the campus. She might have met him somewhere, but she had no impression of his looks. He was just one of the 300-odd freshmen who had registered at Rice in September.

Accordingly, Peaches did not recognize the lad when he went to the hat-and-coat check room of the University club.

She saw a "bell hop" there in charge, a "button", a youngster in a tight red monkey suit such as any bell boy might wear. But she did not know him. She naturally assumed that he was what he appeared to be—a club servant. She came up to him, glancing around to be sure they were momentarily alone.

"Oh, boy," she purred, smiling, "would you please run out and get me a 10-cent packet of aspirin? I have a terrible headache. Here—here's 50 cents. Just keep the change."

"Hello, Miss Pomeroy," Worthington spoke heartily. "Having a good time?"

She sourd a little at that. It smacked too much of comradeship—from a servant. But then, she had her plan. It wouldn't do to let personal feelings interfere now. She forced a becoming smile again, such a condescending smile as one might give a faithful old gardener, if one were in a bawdy mood.

"Oh, quite," she declared. "A very gay group, isn't it? Is everything running smoothly with the staff?"

"Huh? Oh. I see what you mean. Yeah. Say, gosh, you look nice in your Spanish costume. Who'd you come with?"

Peaches glared at him. Such effrontery! She wanted to slap his impudent face. It took genuine will power to control her feelings, but she did.

"Will you get my aspirin, or not?" She spoke ominously.

"Oh, all right, all right." The lad thought he was merely being hazed some more—by a senior girl, by another upperclassman who was acting a part. "You'll have to wait the checking counter while I go, though. They'll kill me if I leave it unguarded."

"I'll stay right here by it for you," she assured him. That was, indeed, exactly a part of her plan. Worthington took the 50-cent piece, and came around the corner. He grinned again at Peaches, assuming the friendship he had a right to feel even from a senior girl, but holding to tradition and not speaking any more.

Worthington was a conformist. He had come to love Rice and its traditions, even those that worked so-called hardships on freshmen. He realized that next year he would be a sophomore—then HIS sun would shine! It is the great and powerful hope of every freshman, everywhere.

The sophs had picked on Worthington this night for two excellent reasons. First, he was a likeable, tractable freshman known to be a good sport and known to enjoy a good time. Second, he "had it coming to him" because he had dared to make love to and marry a Rice girl, in spite of the sophomores. He was very young of face and form. In short, he was the perfect slime to play bell hop.

Now the sophomores had some definite plans for this dance, this big international ball. For one thing, they expected to bring a genuine bull up the elevator of the University club about midnight, and so honor Mexico with a bull fight somewhat more real than the impromptu one that Don Romero and Bob Towne had staged. Even now they had the yearling bull tied in the club garage downstairs.

But the sophs also wanted some fun at the finale of the night's whoopee. Wherefore, they "looked over" the hat-and-coat check room by placing Slime Gurley in charge in a buttons uniform. When they got around to it, they would go in and exchange the checks, switching them every conceivable way. At closing, Slime Gurley would get the brunt of the trouble. And the sophs would sit back for some academic laughter—having first claimed their own hats and coats properly, of course.

Worthington knew these things. He hadn't been stupid. He had even agreed—with boyish zest—to act the part as best he could, for he could see the possibilities of fun. He had been out dancing earlier in the evening, then had slipped into his buttons suit on command. He had only the last dance with Marcia anyway, now, and he might have to give that up. Oh, well, he had her for keeps; she would understand, for she was a freshman, too.

He came around the counter, therefore, grinning knowingly at Peaches Pomeroy.

"One packet of aspirin," he spoke very correctly then, acting. "Yes, madam, I'll get it at once."

Then he disappeared, leaving Peaches alone. At once the hard look came back to Peaches' face. Anyone, seeing it, would surely have been frightened.

Hints on Etiquette

At an informal party, a newcomer may be introduced to a small group of people, instead of to each person separately. The correct form would be: "Mr. Jones—Mr. Roberts, Mr. Franks, Mr. Browning." If the group is composed of both men and women, it is better to introduce each separately.

NOW... HOME LOANS

ON THE "EASY PAYMENT PLAN"

To many borrowers the most attractive feature of these new kinds of loans is the monthly payments, like rent, which include interest, reduction of principal, taxes and insurance. No large, unexpected bills are left to come at embarrassing times.

The difficulties are fast being removed from the path of the credit-worthy home owner. If enough qualified borrowers buy, build, refinance or improve homes now, at today's low costs, such loans will help provide many jobs and speed business recovery.

SELLING

A SUCCESSFUL businessman, conducting an informal school of salesmanship for a group of young men, is giving them not only technical instruction but sound principles and a rather inspiring glimpse of the future.

Two abilities all salesmen must have, he says. First, the ability to like people, because it's hard to do business with people you don't like. Second, the ability of self-control. In this he includes work, study, mental attitude and other factors.

As for opportunities this expert presents a prospect that is challenging and inspiring.

"In the last fifty years" he says "we have been doing a fine job of increasing our ability to produce goods. At the same time we have been neglecting the distribution of these goods — just as important from the standpoint of consumption, as their production is.

I have no doubt that the next twenty years will bring an emphasis on distribution, the like of which has never been seen. I want to do my part, small though it be, to increase the efficiency of distribution today."

Wider distribution and consumption of the necessities and comforts of life calls, no doubt, for more than mere salesmanship. Goods must be good, and prices must be within reach of the buyers. But the art of selling things is, in itself, a very important part of the economic process.

This process is a sort of triangle consisting of production, distribution and consumption. All three are vital.

We have mastered the production job; our industry, our agriculture and art can produce all that people need or can use. And the people are eager for a great deal more than they are getting.

The salesman is the distributing link between the other two. By selling more goods he stimulates production, makes more work, increase the ability of consumers to buy, and speeds up the whole system of producing and using wealth.

SAILORS IN CARS

IT IS good news that the gobs in Uncle Sam's navy can now swim. It has been a required skill for sailors since 1930.

That this has been a safeguard for the young men is suggested by the fact that more sailors die in automobile accidents than by drowning. With the exception of 1933, motor-vehicle accidents have been

LIBERAL-CONSERVATIVE BREAK

WASHINGTON—Three significant facts emerged from the meeting of the Republican National Committee:

1. That there is just as sharp a cleavage between liberals and conservatives in the GOP as there is among the Democrats.

2. That there is strong rank-and-file sentiment that Herbert Hoover and National Chairman John Hamilton must be eliminated from leadership if the party is to win in 1940.

3. That the congressional leaders, aligned with the liberals, are determined to shape their own policy in legislation and to brook no interference from the Hoover-Hamilton group.

The struggle for control between the Old Guard and Young Guard and the undercurrent of hostility toward Hoover and Hamilton are part of the same fight. There are, however, veteran leaders who oppose the young militants but at the same time agree with them that Hoover and Hamilton must be retired to the back-ground.

Privately, these Old Guarders said that the National Chairman and former President had become unpopular symbols in the public mind, that the party could not afford to go into the Presidential campaign encumbered with them.

TOUGH CUSTOMER

The consensus of opinion among all groups was that no serious difficulty would be encountered in shelving Hamilton. He has never been really popular, and now estranged from Landon, the man who named him, he will be replaced sooner or later. But squelching Hoover is a different matter.

The ex-President does not hold a party office, and it is difficult to shoot at an intangible target. Also, Hoover has powerful business and political allies, is thus in a position indirectly to make his influence felt in the councils of the party even though he doesn't show his hand.

This was demonstrated by the selection of ex-Senator Dan Hastings of Delaware to the Executive Committee over Kenneth Simpson, progressive campaign manager of New York's Tom Dewey. The maneuver was put over entirely by Hoover, although he did not appear openly at any time in the bitter undercover fight.

Hoover had previously tried to stop Simpson's election as National Committeeman by the New York State Committee. Rank-and-file hostility to Hoover made it self felt and Simpson won, but in the National Committee, Hoover had no such trouble with the older party leaders.

This struggle of the GOP rank-and-file with its leaders will be intensified from now on. Its outcome may determine the fate of the party's drive to return to national control in 1940.

the leading cause of accidental deaths in the navy for the last seven years.

Perhaps it would be a good thing to extend the national traffic safety campaign to include the sailor lads.

DIET AND HEALTH

How One's Attitude Influences Sickness

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

WE HAVE been reviewing in the past few weeks the nervous system and the six senses. It is appropriate to go on from that subject to discuss what part of the nervous system which we call the mind can do to influence the body in sickness and in health.

Everybody must know instances of such an effect. In fact, our common speech is full of phrases which indicate such relationship—some sort of a sight made a person "sick."

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

at his stomach"; some emotion "broke my heart"; the mental processes of pity "turned his bowels to water."

Mind Plays Part

But few people realize the extent of this relationship. There is no illness in which the mind does not play a part. As a wise physician has said, "There are two things to sickness—one is the sickness itself and the other is what the patient thinks about the sickness." If you can get the patient in the proper mental attitude towards what is the matter with him, you have often won half the battle.

And much of the illness of the world is due to the patient's inability to take the proper mental attitude towards his illness. He either thinks it is more serious than it is, or else he thinks it is not as serious as it is.

We have people with all gradations of attitude. There is the woman with a little indigestion that she thinks is cancer of the stomach, which it isn't at all, but her whole life is made miserable by refusing to accept that. On the contrary, we have the man who doesn't think his diabetes is very serious and thinks it doesn't need much treatment. He goes from bad to worse, simply because he refuses to recognize the fact that he is really sick.

One of the great advantages of modern medicine is the fact that treatment of these things is undertaken deliberately and consciously instead of haphazardly. The old-fashioned doctor with the good bedside manner, whose very presence in the sickroom made you feel better, was unconsciously using psychotherapy and mental hygiene, but since his day those specialties have become scientific and have been put on a rational basis. Their principles are understood and they can be applied consciously for the patient's benefit.

Preventing mental ill health has become a movement with a definite objective for an increasingly large number of informed people. Mental hygiene assumes that mental health and ill health actually exist and can be understood. It assumes that the distress of a personality struggling with an environment is simply a struggle and not a matter of devils and witches, sin or innerness, nor yet a matter of feeble intellect or feeble will. Mental hygiene further assumes, as Dr. Karl Menninger said, that mental health is attainable and our failure to attain it or retain it is to some extent dependent upon our ignorance of general principles.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

J. W.: "What is the cause of an excess of uric acid in the system? What foods are likely to be the cause?"

Answer: Uric acid accumulates in the system from food only. All meats, especially liver and kidney, contain it. The gouty tendency causes it to accumulate more rapidly than in the normal body.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

FORGET YOUR HABIT

ANYBODY WHO leads an honor from a queen-jack toward an ace has a more or less fixed habit regarding the move. If his card is not covered by the king, he finessees. If the king covers, he comes up with the ace. That may be good bridge on most occasions, but if a player is not prepared to vary that procedure in unusual spots, he may suffer the humiliation of seeing a good contract kicked away.

STARS SAY—

For Tuesday, December 6

THE ASTROLOGICAL forecast for this day holds conflicting testimonies. There is much promise for gain but, at the same time, there are hints of doubtful issues, losses and perplexing problems. There may be loss of money, possibly through carelessness, unsound decisions or the failure to grasp opportunities for growth and expansion.

With two winning tricks in spades, two in hearts and one in clubs, declarer needed four diamond tricks to make his game. The diamond Q was led and when West covered with the K, the A was played from dummy. That play limited declarer to two tricks only in diamonds. With the K, 10 and 9 missing and no other entry to dummy in the other suits, declarer should have allowed the K to hold the trick. Then on the next round of the suit the J could have been played and the third round would have cleared the suit, so that four tricks could have been taken in it.

ROMANCE IN C

BY OREN ARNOLD

CHAPTER 39

NOW THERE are two or three ways to get rid of your rival if you are a woman in love and without compassion.

"You can take the rival out in a boat, for instance, and maneuver to drown her. It has been done. It is quite effective in that it removes the competition from the scene forever. It is as effective, and not nearly as messy as shooting or stabbing or poisoning."

But none of these is entirely perfect as a modus operandi. The law doesn't approve. And, even though the law could be circumvented (as it frequently can be), the man himself wouldn't necessarily erase the departed one from his heart. A much better, safer way would be to contrive some plan whereby the rival is discredited in the eyes of the man himself.

This latter thought had occupied the best attention that Peaches Pomeroy could give it. Peaches had some powerful weapons at her command. Among them was money.

Could she hire some woman to lure Bob Towne away from Sara Sue Davis? Possibly, but that still wouldn't leave Bob's heart free; he would be just shifting his attention to another woman, not herself.

Could she hire some man to lure the Davis person away from Bob? No, because that would only stimulate Bob's own energies, make him woo Sara Sue all the more ardently. Bob already had competition, and hadn't quit.

What, then, could Peaches do?

If Sara Sue Davis could just be compromised—

If she could be suddenly exposed in an embarrassing situation with some man, then Bob Towne would discover that she was unfaithful and so—

Anybody it means hiring someone to do it. It means that the plot can backfire on you, revealing your part in it to your complete embarrassment and detriment. And besides that, Peaches had to admit to herself that the Davis woman was clever. Sara Sue enjoyed a most wholesome and clean reputation; she wouldn't likely be caught napping.

Peaches had been giving bitter thought to these details. Even to the possibility of destroying Sara Sue in an "accident." She shied promptly off the latter, however, for she was inherently a coward. But she was a shrewd, scheming one, and when she sat alone at the dining table, twisting her diamond bracelet, she had her sudden inspiration.

She felt at once that her idea was sound.

It could be worked easily. It would involve no accomplices. It would discredit Sara Sue in a most logical way, publicly, scandalously.

Sara Sue was known to be a widow. Widows are traditionally destitute. In fact, Sara Sue herself had set out to earn a living with her so-called Counsel in Romance. (Peaches referred to it contemptuously, even in her thoughts.) It should be easy for people to believe that Sara Sue was in dire need of money. Yes, it seemed like an excellent plan.

"I wish I had a drink first,"

Peaches murmured. But she got up from the divan in the women's lounge, and went immediately to set her plan in operation.

It would seem that a married man could enjoy a modicum of respect from his associates. Married life is supposed to entail a certain dignity. A married man is supposed to be mature. But—no hum. Not if you are a freshman. Not if your whirlwind romance and elopement has been a fillip of pleasure for everybody on a college campus. Not if you are rather popular, and you and your pretty bride are just a year old.

Mister Worthington Gurley, married man, had suffered interminably (but not unpleasantly) from sophomores. These latter tyrants had felt duty bound to give him extra attention when he stole away the sweetest girl in the freshman class. When he returned to the campus after his elopement, for instance, he was forced to wear old shoes strung around his neck for three more—symbols of his new state.

Most of the Rice folk, therefore, came to know Worthington and Marcia Gurley. But Peaches Pomeroy did not. Peaches knew Marcia by sight, but she had never been conscious of Worthington. The latter was a mere freshman, a slime, beneath her nice socially, one of the noisy crowd that clutter up the campus. She might have met him somewhere, but she had no impression of his looks. He was just one of the 300-odd freshmen who had registered at Rice in September.

Accordingly, Peaches did not recognize the lad when she went to the hat-and-coat check room of the University club.

She saw a "bell hop" there in charge, a "buttons", a youngster in a tight red monkey suit such as any bell boy might wear. But she did not know him. She naturally assumed that he was what he appeared to be—a club servant.

Even now this night for two excellent reasons. First, he was a likeable, tractable freshman known to be a good sport and known to enjoy a good time. Second, he "had it coming to him" because he had dared to make love to and marry a Rice girl, in spite of the sophomores. He was very young of face and form. In short, he was the perfect alibi to play the hop.

Now the sophomores had some definite plans for this dance, this big international ball. Women Arrange To Observe Holiday

The Division of Government of the Monday club, under the leadership of Miss Alice A. May, presented an interesting program Monday in the Library Trustees' room Memorial Hall. Mrs. Paul Johnson read a paper on "The New European Alliances" and Miss Jeanette Reichelderfer one of "The Isolationists" during the program hour.

Mrs. Hulse Hays presided at the business session and appointed Mrs. Howard Jones chairman of a committee to arrange plans for the observance of Christmas for the residents of the Home and Hospital.

Mrs. G. D. Phillips read resolutions of respect expressing the sorrow of the club in the loss of one of the valued members, Mrs. Arthur Hartwell.

Miss May presented Mrs. Johnson who said in opening her talk, "Today the immediate danger of a major conflict is still threatening, yet not so formidable. The entire world is still wondering. Will we be entering on a new year of peace and tranquility?"

She continued with the thought that Americans know that they must be effected in one way or another by the success of statesmen abroad who are working for the common good of all peoples. She feels that peace cannot be insured by treaties or limitation of armaments or courts of justice.

After the World War, the League of Nations was organized to maintain the hard won peace. With the failure of the League Sanctions to administer discipline to aggressiveness, nations throughout Europe ignored limitation of armament as provided by the Treaty of Versailles and entered on a series of alliances.

After discussing the result of these alliances, Mrs. Johnson said that the real question still remains, "Is it necessary for the rest of the world to remain at the mercy of a Europe unable to apply the only final solution to its own terrific problem—federation?"

Miss Reichelderfer in her introduction said that the "Isolationists" are in government affairs, peoples opposed to any measures of national or international cooperation which may lead to war, but they favor international peace, labor, philanthropic and reform activities."

She continued with the thought that they believe that the basic cause of every great war is economic. For this reason they favor any international commercial organization which may promote a just and peaceful development of world economy.

Opposed to them are those who believe that a nation cannot have peace without doing something to earn it.

She stated that the foreign policy of the United States has been in theory based on a few plain ideas, to keep out of European broils; to cultivate good-will among the Latin American countries; to recognize no gains won by force or arms; to stimulate international trade; to promote international disarmament and to give indirect support to the theory of collective action against aggressor states.

A successful sale of articles made by the blind was conducted the close of the program hour.

SHOW SOCIETY DIRECTORATE MAY BE INCREASED FROM NINE TO 15

SUGGESTION BY C. OF C. BRINGS EARLY ACTION

Terms Of Three Members Of Board Expire At End Of Year

WALTERS GIVES UP JOB

Several Larger Departments To Be Divided After Recommendation

An increase in the directorate of the Pickaway County Agricultural society from nine to 15 for 1939 appears probable. A special meeting of the society for nomination of directors will be held Tuesday at 7:30 p. m. in the council chamber.

Terms of three of the nine present directors expire Dec. 31. They are J. M. Lynch, E. E. Wolf and John E. Walters. Nine nominations for directors have been made by members of the society in cooperation with a committee of the Chamber of Commerce that recently recommended the increase in directors.

Those nominated are Herman Hill, J. M. Lynch, E. E. Wolf, Ray E. Rowland, Joseph Burns, Karl J. Herrmann, R. L. Brehmer, Mack Parrett, Jr., and Dan McClain. The committee reported that Mr. Walters did not wish to continue as a director as it conflicted with his work.

Directors who have been elected to serve until Dec. 31, 1939 were R. G. Colville, O. J. Towers and Dr. B. R. Bales. Those elected to serve until Dec. 31, 1940 are C. G. Chalfin, T. D. Krinn and George McDowell.

Election Necessary

Election of the society directors was started previous to the last Pumpkin Show to comply with regulations established by the state for county fairs. Previously the directors had been named by the mayor, president of the society by virtue of his office.

The Chamber of Commerce committee, meeting recently with the show society directors to offer suggestions for improvement of the 1939 show, recommended an increase in the number of directors so some of the larger departments could be divided. The committee believed pumpkins should be in a single department, the flowers, fancywork and art exhibits should be divided, a director should be in charge of amusements, and one should conduct solicitations.

Mayor W. B. Cady explained that the revision of the by-laws of the Pumpkin Show society, later changed to the Pickaway County Agricultural society, had not been completed. A change in the number of directors may be made before the revision, he said.

CURRENTLY considered "Public Enemy No. 1," Benny Dickson, described as a Missouri convict, and his wife, Estelle, are the object of a wide police search in the midwestern United States. Dickson and his wife are wanted for wholesale car thefts, a South Dakota bank robbery and for the kidnaping of several persons. Dickson's latest splurge in crime began at White Pigeon, Mich., when he and two others kidnaped two men while eluding state police in a running gun battle.

Ohio To Register All Its Unemployed By Jan. 2

COLUMBUS, Dec. 6.—(UP)—Arrangements for registration of the first of an estimated 300,000 Ohio applicants for unemployment insurance benefits immediately after Christmas were being made today by the state unemployment insurance commission.

The benefit payment section of the law does not become operative until Jan. 1, but registration points will be established during the preceding weeks in industrial centers of the state to receive applications of jobless persons.

On their appearance at registration offices applicants will receive appointment cards specifying time and place, of additional interviews early in January to complete their registration. All early applicants will have their claims recorded by Jan. 2.

The commission, it was understood, felt this procedure would enable its staff to handle the opening rush with a minimum of confusion and assure all applicants of having the same filing date. This point is important because of the three weeks' waiting period before an eligible applicant can draw his first compensation check.

Must Be Jobless

To qualify applicants must be jobless, must have registered with the state employment service, must be willing to take "suitable" employment, and must have worked at least 20 of the preceding 52 weeks and for employers who are subject to the law.

Each applicant will be asked for such information as his social security number, dates of past employment and names of employers.

In filing a claim the applicant must have an employment insurance identification card as proof that he is registered for work. If he has lost his job since Oct. 1, 1938, he should also have a copy of "the separation report," filed by his employer showing cause of unemployment.

One who has quit his job voluntarily without just cause or who has been discharged with reason will have his waiting period extended from three to six weeks and the maximum period for which he can receive benefits cut from 16 to 13 weeks.

During the initial waiting period the claimant must hold himself in readiness to accept "suitable" employment, but if he does not find work and if found eligible otherwise, his first benefit check is payable at the end of the fourth week after the application—unless his waiting period is for six weeks.

Must Accept Work

Benefit payments will be withheld in the event of failure to accept reasonable offer of employment.

A statement from the commission said "suitable" employment could only be defined after "many things are taken into consideration, such as the worker's morals and safety, his physical condition and past experience."

A claimant cannot be required to take a job that is vacant because of a labor dispute, or one in which the hours, wages, distance from his home and other factors are less favorable than those prevailing for similar work in his own locality.

GIRLS VOTE NO ON HIGH HEELS IN HIGH SCHOOL

CLEVELAND, O. (UP)—The girls' cabinet of suburban Cleveland Heights high school voted "thumbs down" on red finger nails, high-heeled shoes and a preponderance of jewelry for the well-dressed high school girl.

The cabinet decreed that up-to-the-minute high school fashions consist of "sensible" shoes, modest tailored dresses and sweaters. The group presented a style show to illustrate their fashion decrees.

All the models, except one, wore simple two-piece costumes of sweater or middie and skirt, anklets and low-heeled shoes.

The lone model attired in high-heeled, open-toe shoes, fancy up-sweep coiffure and much jewelry, was picketed by fellow students. The pickets carried signs reading: "We Strike Against Bloody-Red Fingernails"; "Heights High Hates High Heels"; and "This Girl Is Unfair to Heights' Rules of Dress."

Must Be Jobless

To qualify applicants must be jobless, must have registered with the state employment service, must be willing to take "suitable" employment, and must have worked at least 20 of the preceding 52 weeks and for employers who are subject to the law.

Each applicant will be asked for such information as his social security number, dates of past employment and names of employers. In filing a claim the applicant must have an employment insurance identification card as proof that he is registered for work. If he has lost his job since Oct. 1, 1938, he should also have a copy of "the separation report," filed by his employer showing cause of unemployment.

One who has quit his job voluntarily without just cause or who has been discharged with reason will have his waiting period extended from three to six weeks and the maximum period for which he can receive benefits cut from 16 to 13 weeks.

During the initial waiting period the claimant must hold himself in readiness to accept "suitable" employment, but if he does not find work and if found eligible otherwise, his first benefit check is payable at the end of the fourth week after the application—unless his waiting period is for six weeks.

Must Accept Work

Benefit payments will be withheld in the event of failure to accept reasonable offer of employment.

A statement from the commission said "suitable" employment could only be defined after "many things are taken into consideration, such as the worker's morals and safety, his physical condition and past experience."

A claimant cannot be required to take a job that is vacant because of a labor dispute, or one in which the hours, wages, distance from his home and other factors are less favorable than those prevailing for similar work in his own locality.

AT THE CIRCLE

There can be little doubt that Trem Carr of Monogram Pictures and his staff meant to feature entertainment in their current production "Sweetheart of Sigma Chi," which comes to the Circle theatre Wednesday only.

For in this production, aside from an extremely interesting story of college life—and love they have seen fit to feature entertainment throughout the production.

This fact is most firmly cemented by the presentation of some of the best talent in radio. Ted Fio-Rito, his orchestra and specialty artists, Lief Erickson, Betty Grable, Muzzy Marcellene and Billy Carey appear in the production and introduce some original songs and music created especially for the picture.

GIRLS VOTE NO ON HIGH HEELS IN HIGH SCHOOL

CLEVELAND, O. (UP)—The girls' cabinet of suburban Cleveland Heights high school voted "thumbs down" on red finger nails, high-heeled shoes and a preponderance of jewelry for the well-dressed high school girl.

The cabinet decreed that up-to-the-minute high school fashions consist of "sensible" shoes, modest tailored dresses and sweaters. The group presented a style show to illustrate their fashion decrees.

All the models, except one, wore simple two-piece costumes of sweater or middie and skirt, anklets and low-heeled shoes.

The lone model attired in high-heeled, open-toe shoes, fancy up-sweep coiffure and much jewelry, was picketed by fellow students. The pickets carried signs reading: "We Strike Against Bloody-Red Fingernails"; "Heights High Hates High Heels"; and "This Girl Is Unfair to Heights' Rules of Dress."

Regular meeting of city council will be held Wednesday evening. Carl C. Leist, solicitor, said no special legislation had been requested for the session.

Council held a committee meeting last week for a discussion of a system of charges for the operation of the municipal disposal plant, but to date no decision has been reached concerning a schedule. Finances were discussed during the committee meeting. Councilmen believed sufficient funds would be available for operation expenses until an advance could be obtained on the tax collection during February or March.
